

PASSAGE #8Social Media

Humans are social animals by nature and crave interaction through conversation, community gatherings, and dating! Over time humans have met this need through creating physical spaces and activities to interact in coffee shops, houses of worship, and playgrounds, for example. With the advent of the Internet, however, people are able to connect socially in new ways. Initially, Internet interactions were one way like an online newspaper relaying information or a two-person conversation via email. However, new avenues for communication allowed for new mediums to evolve like social media platforms for people to interact virtually.

MISSING SENTENCE

This can lead to people interacting less face-to-face with other people in physical spaces.